

“There is no white picture. And there is no old picture.
It is always a question of current experience and current perception.” - Rainer Borgemeister

This work („Reflection“) was created while gradually finding the image through a succession of erasures, overlappings, negations, and revisions. With the building up of layers I become more considered in my actions and begin overlaying the fields of color with images and shapes.

My process is one of adding and subtracting, one that embraces accident and intuition. Repetition and Reflection has become a motif in the work. I become more and more interested in a material i work with. Canvas itself , painting is as much about canvas as it is about a paint.
