Peizažą patiriame per nuotolį, jam nepriklausydami, o jo atvaizdas, net ir maloniai stimuliuojantis, dažnai lieka tik dekoratyvinės vertės. Su šiomis mintimis peizažas man tapo neįmanomos tobulybės simboliu: viena vertus jis yra idealas, kita vertus jis grasina barjeriais ir absurdu, kuomet neįmanoma jam atsiduoti.

Visada kažkiek negražu, šiek tiek smirda, truputį lėkšta, šiek tiek skauda, spaudžia, truputį užknisa, truputį neskanu, truputį gėda, kažkodėl baisu, vis kažko laikiu, visko nesuprantu, šiek tiek abejoju, dvejoju, truputį nenoriu – reikia, mažumėle nepatogu, šiek tiek liūdna, truputį per vėlu, truputį ilgu, nekantru ir visada truputį nuobodu.

We can experience the landscape only from a distance as we are not a part of it. The picture of the landscape may even stimulate pleasantly, yet decoration-worth only. Those thoughts led me to assume a landscape as a symbol of impossible excellence: on the one hand it is the perfectness, but on the other hand it threatens as a barrier when it's impossible to catch it.

There is always a lack of beauty, always a bit of smell, mostly shallow, achy, a bit painful, tasteless a bit. I'm always a bit sick of, shamed a bit and it is always somehow scary. I am mostly waiting for something and understand nothing. I'm not sure, always in doubt, desire not much – I need to. Particularly uncomfortable, blue, a little bit too late, always impatient, yet usually boring.
